Students will analyze primary sources, make inferences, and present their findings to the class via Discussion Boards and/or unit assignments. Students will be assessed thorough quizzes, written analysis, and analytical thinking and creative projects assignments.

Course Objectives and/or Competencies:

Critical Thinking:

Through lectures and a variety of analytical strategies, students will be measured on critical thinking abilities. Independent examinations will specifically be used to assess critical thinking. Other assessment will include essays, primary source activities, and presentations.

Communication:

Measured through objective tests, written assignments, discussions, and presentations measuring the student's ability to communicate.

Social Responsibility:

Because the teaching of history involves recalling examples of successes and failures in social responsibility, and the continual importance of this issue politically and personally today, social responsibility obviously is emphasized. Assessment measures may include readings, primary and secondary source documents, quizzes, exams, discussions, monologue readings and analytical essays.

Personal Responsibility:

The teaching of history also involves evoking examples of accomplishments and disappointments in personal responsibility, and the consequences that personal choices can have, so personal responsibility is logically emphasized. Assessment measures may include class participation, readings, monologue exams, discussions and essays.

Late Work, Attendance, and Make Up Work Policies:

Assigned work will not be accepted past the scheduled due date except only for extreme legitimate emergencies approved by the instructor. The course calendar shows the final date work will be excepted and after that time you will be locked out from submitting. If you know you will have difficulties completing assignments, please discuss this with me ahead of time. Being present in class is vital to your success. If you miss class discussions, lectures are available to you in Brightspace so you do not lose critical academic information due to an absence. Please note that per policy, students will not be dropped after the last day of the student-initiated drops without a compelling reason. A failing grade in the course is NOT a legitimate reason.

Student Behavioral Expectations or Conduct Policy:

Behavior is vital in the college classroom. Professional conduct and respect to all regardless of race, creed, national origin, religion and sexual orientation is not negotiable. This course will present many new concepts in social, political, and religious ideologies and just because a student does not agree with a concept does not give an individual the right to disrespect another's beliefs. Students have the right to personal thought but only tolerance will be expressed verbally.
